

Hail!

Brave adventurer, glad to have you in the party! I am excited to have you join our therapeutic role-playing group, where we incorporate mental health treatment into role-play games in order to make therapy fun. Gamification is a motivational system geared to create behavioral change through introducing skills in a fun learnable format that is a game. Our system heavily uses gamification, role-play therapy, and play therapy techniques to introduce options and choices that motivate participants to make positive changes in their life. The group activity of role-play games creates a peer environment that aids in behavioral and social skills development. The system is fun, challenging and engaging creating long-lasting positive transformations.

Every week you will be sent a group email we use MailChimp so the email could come in to your promotions or junk email box. Please remember to check for the email as the homework sent and it aids in the party members development. The email recap the last session and give some insight into the next game. The email also has links of game related materials that will aid in learning the game. Any game time or location change will also be in the email.

Role-play games are very complex there is a great deal to learn and understand. This is just part of the game and part of what makes it work as a therapy. Motivation to learn new systems can give confidence and improve problem-solving abilities. Aside from the mental health the game will also be steeped in fantasy fiction literary knowledge, the use of simple mathematics, anthropology, sociology, history and politics. Who knew learning could be so fun!

Due to the nature of gaming please inform the game master/counselor when a participant will not be available for the game. Adjustments in the storyline must be made when a player is not present. These adjustments are more easily made when advanced knowledge of a character's absence is given.

If you have any questions or need any information please feel free to contact me by whispering wind spell or scrying... An email or phone call could work as well.
